MYLAN CEO TO TESTIFY BEFORE HOUSE PANEL OVER EPIPEN PRICING

Mylan NL Chief Executive Officer Heather Bresch will appear at a Sept. 21 congressional hearing over price increases for its EpiPen emergency allergy treatment, the U.S. House of Representatives Oversight Committee said in a statement. Mylan has been widely criticized, including by Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton, for sharply raising the price of EpiPens, which are carried by people with life-threatening allergies. Mylan, which acquired the product in 2007, recently raised the list price for a pair of EpiPen auto-injectors to $600. The price has been rising from a cost of about $100 in 2008. Mylan spokeswoman Nina Devlin confirmed that Bresch will attend the hearing. "Heather is very good at being able to give an answer without offering much information," said Evercore ISI analyst Urner Raffat. Rouras

REPORT: CLIMATE CHANGE 'SIGNIFICANT AND DIRECT' THREAT TO U.S. MILITARY

The effects of climate change endanger U.S. military opera-tions and could increase the danger of international conflict, according to three new documents endorsed by retired top U.S. military officers and former national security officials. "There are few easy answers, but one thing is clear: The current trajectory of climatic change presents a strategically-significant risk to U.S. national security, and inaction is not a viable option," said a statement published on Wednesday by the Center for Climate and Security, a Washington-based think tank. It was signed by more than a dozen former senior military and national security officials, including retired General Anthony Zinni, former commander of the U.S. Central Command, and retired Admiral Samuel Locklear, head of the Pacific Command until last year.

U.S. GIVES $38 BILLION AID PACKAGE TO ISRAEL

The United States will give Israel $38 billion in military assistance over the next decade, the largest such aid package in U.S. history, under a landmark agreement signed on Wednesday.

The deal, whose details were reported by Reuters earlier, will allow Washington's chief Middle East ally to upgrade most of its fighter aircraft, improve its ground forces' mobility and strengthen its missile defense systems, a senior U.S. official said.

While the package constitutes the most U.S. military aid ever given to any country, it entails concessions by Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, according to officials on both sides, neuross

Gloucester police chief placed on leave pending investigation

Leonard Campanello is known for his efforts to help opioid addicts.

Gloucester Police Chief Campanello, Leonard who has received national praise for his efforts to help fight opioid addiction. was placed on administrative leave pending the outcome of an investigation, according to the mayor.

Mayor Sefatia Romeo Theken did not elaborate on the reasons for the investigation. She issued the following statement on Tuesday:

"Effective immediately, today September 13, 2016, I have notified Gloucester Police Chief Leonard Campanello that he has been placed on paid administrative leave until further notice and upon completion of an internal investigation. We will have no further comments at this time."

Last year, Campanello pioneered an innovative way to combat the opiate epidemic when he announced that Gloucester police will not arrest anyone who walks in high or in possession of controlled substances or paraphernalia. The move was made to help individuals toward detox and recovery rather than treating addicts like criminals.

Campanello said that he does not know what the investigation is about but isn't too worried, according to the Gloucester Times.

"I have absolutely no concerns in my personal or professional life that I've done anything wrong to warrant any action against me," he told the Times. "I am absolutely and completely unconcerned with this at all. If the city feels they have to take some kind of process with this, go at it.

Poll: Warren has nearly twice the support of Schilling in theoretical race

The notoriously — and often carelessly - loquacious former Red Sox pitcher Curt Schilling recently mused that he may take on U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren in the 2018 election.

It looks like an uphill battle for the former World Series champion at least, two years ahead. of time.

According to a new

WBUR poll surveying Massachusetts residents, 54 percent of likely voters said they'd likely support Warren, and 29 percent reported tentative support for Schilling.

"I would like to be one of the people responsible for getting Elizabeth Warren out of politics," Schilling told WRKO talk radio in August. "She's a nightmare. The left's holding her up as the second coming of Hillary Clinton. Lord knows we don't need the first."

As Boston.com noted, Warren literally shrugged when asked about Schilling's political aspirations to unseat

"I get out there every day and try to do my work on behalf of the people of Massachusetts," Warren told MassLive last month. "I'm also involved in this presidential campaign, trying to make sure that Donald Trump never gets anyplace near the White House. That's what really matters to me."

Asked if she was worried about a matchup with Schilling, the senator offered a curt "no."

Report: Wahlberg said he now regrets seeking to expunge his criminal record

Film actor and Boston native Mark Wahlberg said he now regrets his 2014 request to have his record expunged of an assault and battery conviction for which he spent 45 days in jail in the 1980s.

The star made the remarks Tuesday during a Q&A session at the Toronto Film Festival, where he was on hand to attend the premiere of his film "Deepwater Horizon."

"It was one of those things where it was just kind of presented to me, and if I could've done it over again I would never have focused on that or applied," Wahlberg told the audience, according to The Wrap.

Wahlberg reportedly wanted the record expunged so he could join the LAPD as a reservist, as his status as a felon prevented him from doing so.

That attack, which Wahlberg carried out at the age of 16, in 1989, reportedly left the victim, Hoa Trinh, blind in one eye. Wahlberg told the audience that he learned Trinh's injuries were sustained more than a decade before the attack, when he met

"I was relieved to find out that the injuries to his eye had occurred in the early '70s and not from the incident that happened that night," Wahlberg said. "But I was able to meet with him and his wife and his daughter and apologize for those horrific acts. Some good did come out of it."

His request is still pending with state officials, CHRIS CAESAR

'Raining Poetry' to appear again on city sidewalks

The city will unveil a new round of secret poems hidden throughout Boston's sidewalks just in time for rainy fall weather.

"Raining Poetry 2.0" uses invisible ink to write poems on concrete and are only visible when raining, organizers said Wednesday.

"We hope innovative ideas like these help connect residents to their community by literally putting the city's art at their feet," Julie Burros, chief of the city's Office of Arts and Culture, said in a statement. "This is an incredible opportunity to partner with Mass Poetry and the Boston Arts Commission, and we are so thankful for the hard work of the Mayor's Mural Crew in designing these installations and expanding our "Concrete Library" of poetry."

The first four poems, written earlier this year, were selected by Boston Poet Laureate Danielle Georges and include works from writers with ties to Massachusetts.

This round will feature poems written either in English or Haitian Creole and will reflect the culture of the neighborhoods where they appear.

The new installations include: From Pwezi miste, pwezi

Trump could lose a few pounds, otherwise healthy

Trump, 70, and Hillary Clinton, 68,
the Democrat facing him in the Nov. 8
presidential election, have both promised to release more medical information.

Donald Trump knows he could stand to lose a few pounds but otherwise is in great health, campaign adviser Sarah Huckabee Sanders told MSNBC on Wednesday after the Republican presidential candidate filmed a TV segment about his well-being.

Trump taped an episode of the "Dr. Oz Show" in New York that will air on Thursday, in which he gave host Dr. Mehmet Oz a summary of a physical exam conducted last week. Trump's campaign has said he will also release more medical information to the public.

The show released a short clip on Wednesday that did not include any medical information. In it, Trump told Oz he had two letters with him showing results of tests conducted last week.

"May I see them?"
Oz, a cardiothoracic surgeon, asked, sitting in a chair next to the 70-year-old New York businessman.

"Yeah, sure," Trump said, handing over papers he pulled from his jacket pocket.

Huckabee Sanders said she did not see the summary Trump showed Oz, but said she knew he got a "great report and is in very good health." She said Trump's rigorous campaign schedule showed his stamina.

"He self-admitted he could lose a few pounds," she said. "I think that's most of America, but otherwise he's in incredibly good health."

Clinton this week took several days off the campaign trail to recuperate from a bout with pneumonia, after she nearly collapsed on Sunday at a memorial ceremony for the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks. Clinton plans to resume campaigning on Thursday, her spokesman said.

Previously, Trump's campaign issued a short letter from his doctor saying he was in excellent health, but without such details as whether he takes any medications. Clinton in 2015 released a two-page letter outlining her own medical condition.

Doctor: Clinton's overall health good

The pneumonia Clinton was diagnosed with on Friday is bacterial and non-contagious, said the letter from Clinton's physician, Dr. Lisa Bardack.

Hillary Clinton is healthy and fit to serve as president, her doctor said in a letter on the U.S. Democratic candidate's medical condition provided by the campaign on Wednesday.

"The remainder of her complete physical exam was normal and she is in excellent mental condition," the letter said.

The letter details the treatment Clinton received in the days before and after Clinton diagnosis of pneumonia on Friday before she fell ill as she left a Sept. 11 me-

Bardack has evaluated the former U.S. secretary of state several times, including on Wednesday, after a chest scan on Friday detected her pneumonia.

Clinton received a 10day course of antibiotics, and since Sunday has rested at her home in Chappaqua, New York, where she "continues to improve," Bardack's letter said.

Only bacterial pneumonia, not viral, can be treated with antibiotics.

Since it is not contagious, Clinton was at no risk of transmitting the infection at campaign and fundraising events before or after she was diagnosed.

Additional health records released with the letter show that Clinton's cholesterol and blood pressure are within normal ranges. She takes medication for an underactive thyroid and a blood thinner following a 2012 blood clot in her head while secretary of state.

USA VEIN CLINICS TO OPEN IN FRAMINGHAM, MA ON SEPTEMBER 14

Framingham, MA, September 12, 2016 - USA Vein Clinics will open a new center in Framingham, MA on September 14, 2016. The clinic will be located at 855 Worcester Rd., Suite 13, and will serve patients Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Under the leadership of USA Vein Clinics founder Dr. Yan Katsnelson, a renowned Harvard Medical School trained vascular specialist, and a highly trained staff that includes board-certified physicians and specialists, USA Vein Clinics has become a pioneer in modern vein treatment. And now, residents of Framingham and surrounding areas have the award-winning vein treatment center right in their backyard.

"We are honored to help the people of Framingham and around the nation," says Dr. Katsnelson, "But the real success is not in the number of clinics we operate, but in the thousands of patients we have successfully treated. Most of them come to us for cosmetic reasons—they simply want to get rid of their unsightly varicose or spider veins—not realizing that many of them are experiencing symptoms of a condition called "venous insufficiency," which can cause serious complications if left untreated."

Persons experiencing leg aches or cramps, heaviness in the legs, restless leg syndrome, itching or burning in the legs, discoloration or non-healing wounds in the legs or ankles are urged to call and schedule a consultation immediately, even if they do not have visible varicose veins.

"We are excited to bring our clinic to the Framingham area," says Dr. Katsnelson. "Treatment is quick, effective, non-invasive. The procedures are covered by Medicare and most insurance plans. It makes sense—both for your health and for your looks-to get varicose veins examined and treated as soon as possible."

To schedule a consultation, call USA Vein Clinics at (617) 858-6870.

Snowden backers press Obama for pardon before presidency ends

Three rights groups launched a campaign on Wednesday to try to persuade President Barack Obama to pardon former National Security Agency contractor Edward Snowden on U.S. theft and espionage charges before Obama leaves office in January.

The American Civil Liberties Union, Amnesty International and Human Rights Watch said the time was right to rally support for a pardon for Snowden, who leaked documents about top-secret U.S. surveillance programs to journalists in 2013, fled to Hong Kong and was granted asylum in Russia. The ACLU provides legal representation for Snowden.

Speaking on Wednesday via video, Snowden told a news conference in New York City that he was "comfortable with the decisions I made" but whether or not he gets a presidential pardon is not up to him.

"I do not myself ask for a pardon and I never will," Snowden said.

Snowden said he could not receive a fair. trial in the United States because a law he was charged under, the 1917 Espionage Act, does not let him explain to a jury his reasons for leaking.

"This World War I-era law does not distinguish between those who freely give critical information to journalists in the public interest or spies who sell it to a foreign power for their own," said Snowden, who lives in Moscow.

A pardon now may make sense for Obama, the groups said, because he may be seeking to burnish his legacy and be able to act with less concern for politics. Obama, a Democrat, will leave office at the end of his second, four-year term on Jan. 20.

"Presidents normally take some of the most difficult actions of their eight years in office in the final months," Anthony Romero, the ACLU's executive director, told the news confer-

Friends Meeting at Cambridge Invites You to the Adventure of Quaker Worship

10:30am & 5pm Sunday • 8:30-10am Wednesday

- We are a community that seeks to pray seriously and tries to avoid dogma and ritual. We have no creed.
- Sometimes our deepest meetings for worship take place completely in silence. Most often three to six messages are offered in the course of roughly one hour of worship together.
- Our worship is not programmed and is not led by a minister. We aspire to be led only by the promptings of the Spirit in our hearts and minds.

Quakerism has deep roots in Christianity. Today, active Friends Meeting participants include people from many religious traditions: Christianity, Universalism, Non-theism, Buddhism, Judaism, etc. Many LGBTQ folks participate in our community.

All are welcome in a sincere search for spiritual depth 5 Longfellow Park, Cambridge • fmcquaker.org • 617-876-6883

Official: New US black history museum may help dialogue on race

The new National Museum of African American History and Culture may help heal the persistent problem of U.S. racism when it opens in 10 days, the head of the Smithsonian Institution said on Wednesday.

The $540 million museum will be inaugurated by President Barack Obama as racial and cultural differences dominate the national scene, and is an ideal place for a dialogue about them, Smithsonian secretary David Skorton said.

The bronze-colored museum's showcase sits on Washington's National Mall, known as "America's Front Yard." It is the only U.S. national museum devoted exclusively to black American life, history and culture, the Smithsonian says.

The Smithsonian Institute's National Museum of African American History and Culture cerry mages

"Opening now, at a time when social and political discord remind us that racism is not, unfortunately, a thing of the past, this museum can, and I believe will, help us advance the public conversation," Skorton told a news briefing on the launch of the museum. the 19th in the Smithsonian system.

Although workers were still putting finishing touches on the museum, director Lonnie Bunch said it would be ready in time for the Sept. 24 opening.

"It's a piece of cake," he said. A Smithsonian spokesman said 200,000 timed passes had been snapped up, with no openings available until November.

The 36,000 items in the collection range from trade goods used to buy slaves in Africa to a segregated railway car from the 1920s and a red Cadillac convertible belonging to rock 'n' roll pioneer Chuck Berry.

Other displays include a slave cabin from South Carolina, a robe used by boxing great Muhammmad Ali and the coffin of Emmett Till, whose 1955 murder in Mississippi helped galvanize the civil rights movement. REUTERS

Zachary Quinto wants you to change your tech habits

The actor talks about how making Oliver Stone's "Snowden" woke him up.

It's never a walk in the park making a movie for Oliver Stone. For Zachary Quinto, it was more rough than usual. The filmmaker's latest film is "Snowden," which tells the story of CIA and NSA employee-turnedwhistle-blower Edward Snowden (Joseph Gordon-Levitt), who learns that the government can and has been snooping in on anyone with a computer or gadget. Quinto plays Glenn Greenwald, the journalist then working for The Guardian, who was one of three (the others being Laura Poitras and Ewen MacAskill) who met Snowden in Tokyo as he leaked the intel that proved malfeasance. The "Heroes" and "Star Trek" actor.

39, talks to us about how the film made him much more aware of how technology makes us vulnerable.

Was your relationship to technology already fraught before you made this?

Like most people, I was pretty cavalier about my relationship to online security. I didn't think about it that much.

When this story initially broke, my reaction was, "Wow, that's intense and it probably has nothing to do with me." The more I learned about the documents that were released and how farreaching and widespread this dragnet operation went - and how many tens of millions were exposed and vulnerable as a result — it made me recognize we're all in this and against it together.

"It has nothing to do with me" is a pretty common line. Most of us probably think that. It's a complacent attitude to adopt, because you never know when the definitions are going to shift or change. You never know when someone might find themselves in opposition to either the government or on the wrong side of the lines. It makes them more of a target. By that time the attitude of "l have nothing to hide" has allowed groups to collect all kinds of information and all kinds of

It's hard to imagine there being a revolution in which people give up data, and use it against to do so.

you when it serves them

their smartphones.

That's what it would require, whether it was voluntary or brought about by catastrophic undercurrents. If you look at the power that technology has in the cyber world, everything is filtered through online networks. Our entire infrastructure is controlled by this technology. If there's some kind of cyberattack on any of these systems, the ramifications are very real and very dire.

Were there things that you learned researching this that were particularly horrifying?

Reading Glenn [Greenwald]'s book "No Place to Hide" was really tough. It delves into a lot of information on these programs - how they evolved, how they found themselves reappropriated to serve the interests in the NSA and the CIA, and how they infiltrated different aspects of our lives. It was hard to wrap my head around how when you log onto wireless internet networks, they can be rerouted and observed. Certain hardware can be intercepted by the CIA and tampered with to put in catchalls, so that any information. that goes through it is rerouted to collection stations and archived. It's this endless labyrinth.

Have you changed your tech habits since?

Only to the extent that I have tape over the camera on my laptop [as Snowden did, I changed all my passwords, I did a two-step verification on all my devices. I did the things we can do. But the reality is at the level we're talking about, we're still vulnerable. We can strengthen ourselves against lowerlevel interference. But it's when you get to the top of the pyramid, you think, "How safe can we ever be at this point?" That's the question this film asks audiences to consider and discuss.

KT Tunstall's single "It Took Me So

We all can sing along with KT Tunstall. The Scottish singer-songwriter's two early 2000s megahits thrust her into the spotlight with her first studio album, "Eye to the Telescope." Not only did Tunstall dominate the radio charts, her music lent itself as a pop culture plot device — think the "Fight Song" of back in the day.

If there was a television show about an ambitious woman with her eye on the prize, "Suddenly I See" likely appeared in the trailer. Hillary Clinton nearly chose the song as her official 2008 campaign single (it was rejected for using the word "hell") while "Black Horse and the Cherry Tree" earned her a Grammy nom for Best Female Pop Vocal Performance.

Tunstall churned out albums (2007's "Drastic Fantastic," 2010's "Tiger Suit," and 2013's "Invisible Empire//Crescent Moon"), but nothing quite stuck the way her 2004 debut did.

"I decided not to make any records for a while," the 41-year-old remembers. "I had gone through massive shifts in life that were difficult and some that were rewarding. I lost my dad and things had changed in London so I packed up, sold everything, and moved to Venice Beach."

I started writing in secret — I didn't tell anyone, and by the time I told the label, I had done a bunch of demos on Garage Band and the [album] was close to done."

The result is "Kin," an 11-track fifth LP recorded in L.A. for Caroline Records. The first two releases, "Maybe It's a Good Thing," and "It Took Me So Long to Get Here, But Here I Am," are just as literal as they sound. Producer Tony Hoffer, known for his catalog of work with Beck, Sondre Leche,

"In recording the album] I didn't want to do it unless I would be enjoying myself. That doesn't mean it had to be easy. It didn't mean it had to be simple. It means that it has purpose and fulfillment."

Your guide to fall beers

There's so much more than pumpkin out there, will GORDON

I don't think of New Englanders as an optimistic people overall, but I do admire how we have collectively chosen to fetishize autumn around here. Despite our general grumpiness, we all band together and pretend to love nothing more than finally getting summer behind us — who needs sunny 80-degree days and borderline tolerable MBTA service? — so we can get down to the serious pleasures of paying to do farm labor and watching trees die in colorful fashion. But even if you're not into picking apples and Instagramming leaves, there some legitimate reasons to love autumn in New England, such as the arrival of fall seasonal beers. Here are a half-dozen of the best available.

Jack's Abby Copper Legend

It stands to reason that the Framingham-based lager savants would excel at marzen, the traditional Bavarian Oktoberfest style. Copper Legend is simultaneously bold and smooth, with rich caramel flavor supported by subtle biscuit, pine and pepper notes.

Harpoon Flannel Friday

Boston's biggest brewery intends to offer this beauty year-round, but it just made its debut and there are falling leaves on the label, so let's pretend it's a fall beer. Flannel Friday is an amber ale gussied up with citrus and tropical fruit notes from a high hop dosage.

Sierra Nevada Oktoberfest

Sierra Nevada is arguably the most important brewery in modern American beer history, which is to say the most important thing of any kind at any time or place. But that doesn't prevent them from consulting with German experts when it comes to the annual crafting of this fall seasonal. Every year Sierra Nevada selects a different German brewery to partner with to produce Oktoberfest; this year's winners are Mahrs Brau and the American drinking public. The rare Record hop breed lends a spicy edge to this caramel-forward wonder.

Allagash Hugh Malone

Most fall seasonal beer releases are of the pumpkin, fake-pumpkin or Oktoberfest variety. This Belgian-style India pale ale from Portland is an exception, and it makes the list both for novelty's sake and because it happens to be one of my all-time favorite foods. Clove and banana aromas from the yeast combine with floral, pine, and citrus hop notes to create a complex, multidimensional beer that pairs perfectly with any food or occasion. (It's particularly nice with pancakes.)

Firestone Walker Oaktoberfest

This Californian import's name is a playful nod to its hometown of Paso Robles, which means "pass of the oaks" in Spanish. It's a rich, sweet, malty marzen full of caramel and honey, with just enough German noble hop character for balance. In other good news, this year Firestone Walker had the good sense to package Oaktoberfest in 16-ounce cans.

Cambridge Brewing Company Great Pumpkin

New England's first modern pumpkin beer debuted in 1990, and it's still the best fermented gourd juice around, with fresh local pumpkins adding depth and sweetness to the customary nutmeg and cinnamon.

Chef lason Santos is cooking up something secretive and Southern in the Back Bay this fall. ANDRE LAMBRASE

You might know Chef Jason Santos by his blue hair. Or you might know him by his two Boston establishments — Abby Lane in the Theater District or Back Bay Harry's in Bay Village. Or (more likely) you know him from both. The 40-yearold Medford resident's playful culinary techniques landed him on the seventh season of "Hell's Kitchen" — he made it pretty far — and he's set to open his latest endeavor, a Southern restaurant called Buttermilk and Bourbon, later this fall. Santos shares his favorite date-night restaurant, where he takes his out-oftown guests and the best little spot in Chinatown.

Best late night meal?
I love heading to Chinatown late night after a shift. For many years, my favorite place has been New Golden Gate. The food is great and I've tried everything on the menu — you can't go wrong.

66 Beach St.
617-338-7721

Best meal under $5?
I wish I knew of a good meal under $5. I do know that Night Market in Cambridge has some great menu items for $3 and $4 — like their tea eggs and numb nuts.
75 Winthrop St.,
Cambridge, nightmkt.com

Best hidden foodie gem?
I live in Medford, and there is a place called Bob's Italian Foods, which is an old school deli with ridiculously good sandwiches. I go there all the time and get their Italian sub. I legit crave it.

324 Main St., Medford, bobsfood.com

Best place to dine alone? I feel totally comfortable dining at the bar at Eastern Standard. The whole team makes you feel at ease when solo. 528 Commonwealth Ave., easternstandardboston.com

Place you always take out-of-towners? My top pick is always Toro. It's such a great restaurant; everything about it is right: the atmosphere, the menu, the service, the drinks. It is all just spot-on. 1704 Washington St., toro-boston.com

Go-to date spot?
My girlfriend, Thuy, and I love going to Boston Chops for date night. Chef Chris Coombs and his team make the best steak in town, and the space is gorgeous. We love to share sides, especially the poutine baked potato and the broccoli. 1375 Washington St., bostonchops.com

Best place to catch up with friends?
We live close to Assembly Row, and our go-to place is River Bar. The cocktails are delicious, and it's very approachable.
661 Assembly Row,
Somerville, river-bar.com

Most Instagrammable dish in town?
Anything at Alden & Harlow and Waypoint. Michael Scelfo's food is on-point and makes for beautiful photos.

These plush lodgings deep in the African bush have set the gold standard for eco-friendly luxury. The magic happens in an ecoresort on Gambia's River Mandina, a mangrovelined, mosquito-free tributary of the River Gambia. Pools with glorious jungle views, daily land and river excursions, room service and delicious meals add to the deluxe feel — and there's no Wi-Fi or television here.

Sukani Rainforest Lodge

This gorgeous eco-lodge in Borneo, Malaysia, is perched on the banks of the Kinabatangan River, inside a wildlife sanctuary known for its exceptional biodiversity. River cruises on wooden boats provide an opportunity to see seven species of primate, including proboscis monkeys and orangutans. Elephants, rhinos, sun bears and leopards also roam here.

Bangaar Tola

Forget any worries about tatty tents and mosquito bites — this jungle camp in the middle of India's prime tiger territory is pure luxury. The 18 plush "tents" are semi-permanent suites made with compressed bamboo walls and floors and feature deep bathtubs, silk drapes and hand-crafted furniture, on a prime riverbank spot in Kanha National Park, where big cats are easily seen on the daily safaris. Located in the misty hills of the southeastern state of Madhya Pradesh, the park is also home to leopards, striped hyena, porcupines and ant-eating pangolin, as well as some 200 bird varieties flitting amid the 70 species of

Cristalino Lodge

Frequently cited as one of the best jungle lodges in the world, this 18-room eco-lodge in the Brazilian Amazon offers truly highend lodgings in the midst of wild nature. Set within a private nature reserve on the densely forested banks of the Cristalino River, a tributary of the mighty Amazon, two 50-meter observation towers offer views at every level of the forest canopy and the chance to see birds and monkeys. Knowledgeable guides lead land and river nature excursions and photography trips.

Lapa Rios

Set in a 1,000-acre nature reserve in the tropical rainforest of the untarned Osa Peninsula in Costa Rica, this five-star luxury eco-lodge is a slice of heaven for anybody who enjoys lazing on the beach as much as trekking through wild jungle. The comfortable cabins overlooking the Pacific Ocean sit on flat ridges in a stretch of jungle that's shared with myriad animal inhabitants including pumas, monkeys, toucans and macaws, to name just a few.

Sanchary Gorilla Lodge

This is the only luxury lodge within Uganda's imposing-sounding

Bwindi Impenetrable Forest, a UNESCO World Heritage Site known for its volcanoes, jagged mountains and famous primate inhabitants perched on a flat ridge high in the jungle. Relaxing in your tented suite after a day on the gorilla trail, you can sink into a deep candlelit bathtub overlooking the forest canopy, or enjoy a meal and a drink in the bar and dining cottage.

Daimtree Ecolodge & Spa

Amid the towering trees and 20-foot ferns of the world's oldest living rainforest in Queensland, Australia, this collection of 15 stylish bayan cabins and treehouses offers luxuries such as massages and facials, a fine-dining restaurant with al fresco deck and balcony Jacuzzis along with modern conveniences such as iPod docks, in-house movies and satellite TV. Guests are invited to interact with local aboriginal communities, take part in jungle treks and enjoy predinner sunset river cruises.

Inkaterra Reserva Amazonica

Guests at this eco-lodge in the remote regions of the Peruvian Amazon Basin can bed down among the birdlife in a surprisingly comfortable canopy treehouse, follow an "anaconda trail" across flooded swamplands, and get a monkey's-eye view of the forest from a walkway suspended through the treetops. And the credentials are impeccable, too: for 20 years the posada has been funding research into the area's ecosystem, and has discovered several new species of tropical amphibian.

Yes, your dog can understand what you're saying

Pet pooches process language like humans and understand words and intonation, according to a new study.

Many dog owners are convinced that their pet understands them and now a study has proved them right.

Researchers from the Department of Ethology at the Eotvos Lorand University in Budapest, Hungary, found that dogs not only understand what we say but how we say it.

investigators The trained 13 dogs to voluntarily lie in an MRI brain scanner to monitor what happened in their brains when a trainer spoke to them. They found that dogs process information just like humans with the right hemisphere of the brain dealing with emotion and the left side with meaning.

"They can not only separately process what we say and how we say it, but they can also combine these two types of information in the reward center of the brain."

Attila Andics

Dogs heard praise words like "Good boy," "super," and "well done" and meaningless words, like, "however," "even if," and "although," in both praising and neutral intonations.

"They can not only separately process what we say and how we say it, but they can also combine these two types of information in the reward center of the brain [the region which typically responds to food, sex, being petted, or even a nice music in humans]," said lead re-searcher Attila Andics.

"A dogs' reward center is activated only when both word meaning and intonation were consistent - a praise word said in a happy tone."

He added: "If we are conscious about the study's results when we talk to our dogs, we can help to make communication between our species even more effective. We don't think dogs will start talking, though." In the future, scientists are planning to research how pooches process and represent different speech sounds, different speakers and even grammar.

Jimmy Garoppolo exceeded expectations on Sunday night, certy maces

THIS MUCH IS TRUE — GAROPPOLO CAN PLAY

It was only one game. But here's sidel what we now know about Jimmy be as Garoppolo made his first career NFL start on Sunday night in Arizona, helping the New England Patriots to a 23-21 win over the Cardinals. The 9.5-point spread told you all you needed to know about what was supposed to happen in this nationally televised Week 1 battle.

Garoppolo: The kid can play.

The Pats were underdogs because they were without Tom Brady. They became even greater underdogs when Rob Gronkowski was ruled out.

As someone who admittedly sips the Patriots' Kool-Aid more often than not, there was a real hope that Bill Belichick would still be able to construct a gameplan worthy of stealing a win. That gameplan would have to include putting plenty of pressure on Carson Palmer, while not asking your own quarterback to do too much. Run the football, play solid defense, and rely on special teams to shock the football world, a football world that is only realistic to expect the Patriots to struggle without two of the best players in the game.

Now, entering a Week 2 game at home against Miami, the Patriots are 1-0, the only team in the AFC East to win in Week 1. But they weren't perfect in Arizona. They lost the turnover battle. Both Garoppolo and LeGarrette Blount lost fumbles. Meanwhile, the Cardinals didn't turn the ball over once. And even though Garoppolo's numbers aren't going to win him player of the week honors, he did some things that I honestly didn't think he had in him, Solo oup full of Kool-Aid and all.

Garoppolo finished the win going 24-of-33 for 264 yards passing, while throwing one touchdown, a perfect 37-yard strike down the left sideline to Chris Hogan. You can't be any more cool, calm and collected than Garoppolo was while dropping back to make that pass. And you can't drop it in there any more perfect than Garoppolo did. I'll be the first to tell you I didn't see that coming.

There are plenty of question marks surrounding a guy who had never made a regular-season start. But if you had told me Garoppolowould complete 24 passes and throw zero INTs, I would have at least told you the Patriots had a chance to win a low-scoring affair.

Credit to Garoppolo for not throwing a single pick against a very good defense, in their building. But also, if you had told me Garoppolo would throw the ball 33 times, I would have told you he'd throw at least one interception.

I expected the gameplan to be one that wouldn't ask Garoppolo to make too many big throws down the field when he didn't have to. That wasn't the case. Garoppolo answered the call, as you saw right away on his touchdown pass to Hogan.

All of a sudden, Brady's backup looked like a big-game hunter, even without one of the NFL's most dynamic receivers in Gronkowski.

This isn't me telling you that Garoppolo is about to steal Brady's job. He's not. That notion is laughable. There might actually be some lunatics who believe that. But I assure you I'm not one of them. And I never will be, regardless of what happens in the next three games. This is still Brady's team. No ifs, ands or buts about it.

That said, what Garoppolo did on Sunday in Arizona was pretty damn impressive. Sure, it was only one game. But it was enough to answer a question most of us asked all summer long.

Now we know. The kid can play.

Bill Dubiel is a fantasy football expert for Rotoballer.com.

Looking around the league, one week into the season, and a look ahead to Week 2.

Allen injury clears the way for Tyrell Williams

For the third season in a row. Keenan Allen will not play a full season of football - in fact, he won't play another down in 2016. As unfortunate as the injury is, fellow Charger Tyrell Williams should benefit from a fantasy perspective. Travis Benjamin is the more well-known name, but he is more of a burner while Williams is the bigger, stronger receiver. He should occupy Allen's role on the outside, and that should return healthy dividends in the passhappy Chargers offense.

Shane should show up in shootout

Giants scat-back Shane Vereen could be in for a big week as the best pass-catching option in the Giants backfield. The Giants get the New Orleans Saints at home, and given the fact that Drew Brees should have no problem putting up points against the New York secondary, this game should quickly evolve into a shoptout. With the Giants trying to keep pace on the scoreboard, Vereen should see plenty of work on tosses and quick routes, and is a good bet to rack up receptions.

Rudolph to benefit from dink-and-dunk offense

Vikings tight end Kyle Rudolph is universally known as an end zone threat and nothing more, but his role could change in 2016 with Shaun Hill under center (replacing the injured Teddy Bridgewater). Rudolph was targeted eight times in Week 1, and he converted those looks into 65 yards on four catches. Even if Sam Bradford takes over for the veteran Hill, Rudolph should maintain his role in the middle of the field, as Bradford's arm isn't much stronger than Hill's. If you waited on tight ends in your draft, Rudolph should be an effective TE2 on your team with upside.

NFL sleepers of the week

Each week we will identify three players worth taking a shot on in deeper leagues.

Chris Thompson, RB, Washington Redskins - Starter Matt Jones was largely ineffective in Week 1, and Thompson outgained him on the ground and through the air. Could take Jones" job spon.

Eli Rogers, WR, Pittsburgh Steelers – Seems to be locked-in as the slot receiver in the explosive Pittsburgh offense. Even with Wheaton returning he'll have a role.

Austin Seferian-Jenkins, TE, Tampa Bay Buccaneers – Just one catch in Week 1, but it was in the end zone. He's got huge upside and should see more targets as the season wears on.

Shane Vereen could be a valuable running back on your roster if you're in a PPR league. GETTY IMAGES

Aries Don't share information that you don't want made public. Your reputation will depend on the way you handle personal matters. Learn from your experiences.

Taurus Get involved in something you feel passionate about in order to gain confidence as well as boost your reputation. A short trip will be informative.

Gemini Use your charm to wiggle your way into a position that will be more rewarding financially. A partnership looks promising if you initiate the changes you want to see.

Cancer You'll learn through the experiences you encounter today. A spiritual or philosophical awakening will help you make a life-altering decision. Follow your heart.

Leo Financial matters should be handled with care. You may feel like taking a risk, but the information you are given regarding a joint venture will fall short of your expectations.

Virgo If you keep your life simple and your mind on what's important, you will find a way to dodge any negativity and emotional manipulation that comes your way.

Sagittarius Keep an open mind, but don't let anyone push you into something that will jeopardize your reputation or detract from your happiness. Put your needs first.

Capricorn Let your memories take charge and help you learn some valuable lessons from your past. Nothing will work well without the support of the people you care about.

Aquarius Don't let someone's inability to be straight with you get you down. You will find many other opportunities to collaborate with like-minded people.

Pisces Stay calm and refuse to become stressed and angry over something you cannot control. Personal satisfaction will come from self-improvements. EUGENIA LAST
